Why Did Warren Buffett Decide To Suddenly Buy Gold After Avoiding It for Over 60 Years?

WARREN BUFFETT BUYS GOLD

He Hated Gold His Entire Career. But Now the World's Top Investor Has Bought $560 Million in GOLD... Why Now?

Dear Reader,

If you've followed Warren Buffett's career you know he has never been a fan of investing in gold.

In fact, he has said:

"[Gold] gets dug out of the ground in Africa... Then we melt it down, dig another hole, bury it again and pay people to stand around guarding it. It has no utility. Anyone watching from Mars would be scratching their head."

Well, now people here on Earth are scratching their heads after finding out Buffett purchased $560 million of Barrick Gold (GOLD).

The news broke after investors analyzed Berkshire Hathaway's 13F filing in August, revealing he made a significant investment in gold.

This sent shockwaves through Wall Street as Buffett has been such an outspoken critic of gold his entire career. It also raises an alarming question:

Does Buffett know a huge market crash is right around the corner?

While he hasn't come out publicly to say this yet, his right-hand-man, Charlie Munger, has said stock returns will be lower from 2020-2030 than they were from 2010-2020.

Munger, the Fed is playing a dangerous game:

 Charlie Munger

"This has been unbelievable. There's never been anything quite like it. We're in very uncharted waters. Nobody has gotten by with the kind of money printing now for a very extended period without some kind of trouble. We're very near the edge of playing with fire."

Buffett spent most of 2020 selling stocks, including all his shares in airline stocks, Restaurant Brands International, Pfizer and Costco. He also sold over $1 billion worth of Apple stock and over $2 billion of Wells Fargo stock.

In total, he sold over $28 billion of stocks in 2020... unusual behavior for a man known for saying when he buys a stock, it's for life.

And then to turn around and buy gold -- an investment he's been highly critical of his whole life -- is a strong sign he believes the market will crash hard in 2021.

And even though he hasn't publicly stated this (probably because he doesn't want his own shareholders selling all their stocks)... he has revealed the one indicator he trusts above all others to gauge the health of the market.

"The Buffett Indicator"

The technical term is the "market cap to gross domestic product (GDP) indicator" but Wall Street insiders simply know it as the "Buffet Indicator."

It's an indicator many top investors use to gauge whether the market is undervalued, fair valued or overvalued. It's measured by dividing the collective value of a country's stock market by the nation's GDP.

And the higher it is, the more the market is overvalued.

And the more overvalued the market is, the closer we are to the next crash.

As of March 1, 2021 The Buffett Indicator is at an alarming 193%, which means the stock market is “significantly overvalued.” To put this in perspective, it’s currently more overvalued than it was right before the Dot Com Crash in 2000 (see below):

source: <https://www.currentmarketvaluation.com/models/buffett-indicator.php>

“Shiller Ratio Will Give You Chills”

Another key market indicator that many top investors monitor is the Shiller price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio for the S&P 500. Unlike the standard P/E ratio, the Shiller ratio is based on average inflation-adjusted earnings from the previous 10 years, not just the earnings from a single year.

Over the last 150 years, the Shiller P/E has averaged 16.78. But as of March 4, it’s at an extremely high number of 34.37 -- more than double the long-term average. The only time this has ever been higher was when it reached 44.19 in December 1999, right before the Dot Com Crash. And the third highest level was in September 1929, right before Black Tuesday.

Simply put, it’s a very bad sign when the Shiller P/E ratio is higher than 30.

and greedy when others are fearful."

- Warren Buffett

So while the masses are celebrating the miraculous “V-Shaped” recovery and buying stocks in Tesla, GameStop and Apple... seasoned investors are unloading stocks by the billions and preparing for the economic tsunami triggered by the major financial quake of 2020.

What else would cause former gold skeptics like Buffett, to suddenly undergo a dramatic conversion and suddenly buy $568 million of gold?

And it's not just Buffett...

Billionaire Sam Zell, founder of Equity Group Investments, recently bought gold for the first time in his 51-year investing career too.

In an interview with Bloomberg he said:

"For the first time in my life,
I bought gold because it is a good hedge. Supply is shrinking and that is going to have a positive impact on the price."

- Bloomberg

Ray Dalio, another billionaire investor and chief of Bridgewater Associates, says...

"I believe that it would be both risk-reducing and return-enhancing to consider adding gold to one's portfolio."

- Billionaire Investor, Ray Dalio

In fact, it's one of his top three investment picks for 2021.

Dalio believes gold could be a very powerful way to defend your portfolio from what he calls the upcoming "paradigm shift" in investing. He wrote:

"In paradigm shifts, most people get caught overextended doing something overly popular and get really hurt," Dalio wrote on LinkedIn. "On the other hand, if you're astute enough to understand these shifts, you can navigate them well or at least protect yourself against them."

And it's not just hedge fund managers and world-class investors that have been advocating investors hedge their bets with gold. Even central banks have been on a gold buying spree recently...

Central Banks Are On Gold Buying Spree

In recent years, countries have been buying up as much gold as possible. And in the last several years we've seen central banks buy more gold than ever before. In 2019 they added 650 tons to their reserves, the second highest shift in 50 years. And they don't seem to be slowing down.

Many experts find this behavior unusual for governments that can simply print more money. The U.S. for example, went off the gold standard back in 1973, so why would they be so eager to fill their coffers with gold now?

Many believe the only rational answer is that these countries are doing the same thing the smart forward-thinking billionaire investors are doing: protecting their wealth.

They know gold acts as a form of wealth insurance because it continues to have intrinsic value, which is especially important when inflation skyrockets and markets crash...

But what exactly is intrinsic value?

One of the best ways to understand it is to study nickels...

The Intrinsic Value of Coins:

Why A Nickel Is Worth More than 5 Cents

If you have a nickel around please pick it up and hold it as you read this. Or next time you see one pick it up and remember what I'm about to share with you (and teach it to your kids and grandkids too because this is an important investing lesson)...

Now let me ask you a question...

What is the value of that nickel?

If you ask that question to a savvy investor they would likely respond with a question of their own...

“Do you mean the face value or the intrinsic value?”

That's because there's a big difference between the two:

Face Value: Is the stamped or printed value located on the coin itself. It's value is derived from the government that issued it. In this case the U.S. government.

Intrinsic Value: Is the term used when referring to the 'melt value' of the metal itself. It has value that goes beyond whatever the government decides it's worth.

For example, the nickel you're holding is worth about 5.78 cents right now in its melt value.

So a nickel's intrinsic value is really worth 5.78 cents [15% more].

If that's true, then wouldn't it be a good move to go buy as many nickels as you could get your hands on?

Well, that's exactly what one famous investor did.

Kyle Bass purchased $2 million worth of nickels after thinking about ways to invest that would come with little to no risk. And since nickels had intrinsic value worth more than the face value, he pulled the trigger.

"If I could take my entire cash balance of my net worth and press a button and turn it into nickels, I would do it right this second. Because then you don't have to worry about how much money they print. The nickel will always be worth a nickel."

"While The Value of a Dollar Is Plummeting A Nickel Will Always Be Worth a Nickel!"

Bass is right...

When you own coins that have intrinsic value you no longer have to worry about how much money they print.

And lately they've been printing A LOT of money!

In fact, the Fed printed around $3 trillion in the spring of '20 and pumped it into the economy.

And now with Biden in office, many investors fear the runaway freight train of printing money is not going to stop or slow down, especially with Democrats controlling the White House, Senate and House.

How far will this go?

Only time will tell. But within Biden's first 7 weeks another $1.9 trillion was approved to be printed and injected into this crippled economy.

So when you stop to think about it, is it really that surprising to see smart investors like Buffett and Zell buy gold for the first time in their lives?

Is it really any surprise the Fed is quietly buying up all the gold they can (while trying to persuade people to do the opposite)?

The fact is, the smart money crowd knows the only way to really protect yourself from what's about to happen is to buy gold.

Why All the Fuss About Gold? What Actually Happens to Gold When the Market Crashes?

People have a lot of opinions about money and investments, right? And while opinions are interesting, it's the facts you want to focus on.

And the fact is, historically speaking, when stocks crash, gold rises.

Just look at what happened in '08. It's like gold and stocks are on opposite ends of an economic pulley and when you pull one down the other rises.

source: <https://www.bullionvault.com/gold-news/buy-gold-lehman-091420184>

The fact is gold balances your portfolio against inflation, the dropping value of the dollar, and market crashes.

And it protects your buying power, your total wealth and gives you a truly balanced portfolio.

For example, let me tell you a hypothetical story of two different 65-year-old men who we'll call Joe and Mike.

Joe and Mike each had $1 million saved for retirement.

Joe had what he thought was a "balanced portfolio".

He followed his broker's advice and had all his money in stocks, mutual funds and bonds.

Then the housing market crash of 2008 hit.

His $1,000,000 nest egg would have shrunk to $600,000 between 2007-2011.

WEALTH PROTECTION

$1,000,000 Portfolio in 2008

$1,000,000 – Dollar Based Assets

$400,000 – Market Loss

$600,000 – TOTAL WEALTH

And when he asked his broker about this all he said was, “Don’t worry, the market always bounces back. You’ll be fine.”

But the problem was he was 65 years old. He was living off this money now and couldn’t afford to “wait it out.”

After many sleepless nights and difficult conversations with his wife, they came to the sobering realization he would have to go back to work or they would run out of money.

This was the unfortunate reality for so many retirees after 2008.

They had to return to work while the Wall Street brokers, the ones who caused this mess, simply got bailed out by Uncle Sam because they were “too big to fail.”

As reported by US News:

One thing is undeniable: Big banks are bigger than ever in 2020. Between 2008 and 2011 or so, commercial banks held about $12 trillion in assets. Fast forward to 2020, and that number has soared to more than $20 trillion for the first time, according to data published by the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis.

However, Mike was a different story...

Mike did what so many forward-thinking investors today are doing... he invested just 10% of his portfolio into gold.

So even though he still had $900,000 tied up in the same type of dollar based assets Joe did, he was able to weather the storm almost unscathed.

That's because his $100,000 investment in gold went up to $455,000. Which helped offset the $355,000 loss he had in his "balanced portfolio."

WEALTH PROTECTION

$1,000,000 Portfolio in 2008

$540,000 – Dollar Based Assets

$455,000 – Pricious Metals

$995,000 – TOTAL WEALTH

So instead of losing $400,000 like Joe did, he only lost $5,000 net.

Now do you see why the world's top investors, billionaires and nations are investing in gold right now? Many of them fear the next crash will be worse than 2008 and if they're right, they know gold will go up so much it'll offset most their losses.

“Bonds will protect me in the next crash, right?”
Wrong! And here's why...

Back in the “normal days” bonds were supposed to be much safer than stocks. You may recall an advisor talking about “the key to a balanced portfolio is having 20% in bonds and 80% in stocks,” or something like that.

However, this logic is completely outdated.

And if you're still operating like this you're putting your retirement at high risk. That's because we're currently in an economic situation that maximizes the weaknesses of bonds while minimizing their strengths.

To put it more bluntly, if you're still following the pre-2020 advice on what a “balanced portfolio” is then you could lose even more money than investors did in 2008. That's because when markets crash hard, both stocks and bonds can fall at the same time.

This happened in the 1940s and in the 1970s. And it could very easily happen again in this next major crash because of our current situation.

Again, this is a case where it's prudent to observe what top investors are doing in this area.

And right now we see many of them moving away from government-issued bonds, which is a strong sign they have lost confidence in our government's ability to pay its debts.

“Ok, so can I just buy some gold stock then?”

Why that's a terrible idea...

When most people talk to their advisor about gold their advisor usually talks them out of it. And that's because their livelihood depends on you keeping your money in the stock market.

And if you were to replace a percentage of your portfolio with gold they would lose money.

So usually their first line of defense is to talk you out of it. However, if that fails they'll present you the option to buy gold stock... Don't do it!

There's a big difference between owning stock in gold and actually owning physical gold.

The Difference Between Physical Gold & Gold Stocks

Gold stocks are traded on the exchange and are subject to volatility. The value of the shares is whatever the marketplace assigns to them. They do not have intrinsic value like we discussed earlier.

If the market drops, the value of gold shares drop right along with it.

That's because shares of gold are normally highly leveraged, meaning companies will sell as many as 200 shares all backed by one unit of gold, not 200 units.

They are also known to lease some of the gold they report on their balance sheets. So companies don't actually own part of the metals they are selling shares of.

But again, if you're talking to a Wall Street broker (which most financial advisors are) then they'll likely recommend gold stock because they will get a commission from it.

You can buy it but just know that if the market crashes your gold stock will likely crash right along with all your other stocks.

Physical Gold Has Intrinsic Value

However, physical gold is a completely different story. Physical gold has intrinsic value (just like nickels, silver and precious metals).

It will hold or increase in value, even if the market crashes or we experience hyperinflation.

And unlike gold stock -- which is just a piece of paper (and today you don't even usually get the paper) -- physical gold is something you can hold.

For example, let's say you had $900,000 saved in retirement and you decided to trade in $100k of stock for $100k of actual physical gold...

You would have in your possession, about 170 gold coins, weighing about 31.6 ounces.

Instead of wondering how well your stocks are doing by looking at a number on a computer screen you could simply open up your fireproof safe and see and touch your investment.

And when the market does crash you'll probably be tempted to open up that safe at least once to look at your gold coins that went from $100k to about $300-400k (this is just a guess of what it could go to... but remember in 2008, $100k of gold did grow to $455,000, so it's an educated guess).

The point is if the market crashes or the government's "printing money by the trillions game" ends, then owning physical gold is the best way to protect your wealth. While the rest of the world watches their stocks plummet in value you'll sleep well at night knowing your wealth is protected.

Gold Bars or Gold Coins?

After someone decides to invest a portion of their nest egg in physical gold one of the first questions is: should I buy gold bars or gold coins?

While some people choose gold bars it's usually not always the best choice...

That's because gold bars can't be traded in for cash, like gold coins. Plus, there are very few people who can actually buy them back, because they are hard to fractionalize and melt down.

And gold bars are also one of the most counterfeited items because they are easier to counterfeit than coins.

Therefore, we believe general circulation gold coins are a far better investment than gold bars. They have less risks than gold bars, with similar or sometimes more, return.

Which Type of Gold Coins?

The next question savvy investors ask once they've seen how effective physical gold coins are in helping protect their wealth is:

"What type of gold coins should I buy?"

Should I buy the:

- a) Gold American Eagle coins minted in 1986?
- b) The American Buffalo Gold Coin minted in 2006?
- c) The new $5 Gold Half Eagle, set to be released in 2021?

d) None of the above.

The correct answer would be: d) none of the above.

The best gold coins are the Pre-1933 US Gold Coins. Here's why:

[Pol: Here we will use gold checkmarks instead of bullet points]

- US-minted general circulation Pre-1933 Coins have an organic supply and demand because there are only so many of them.
- Pre-1933 Coins can't be produced anymore because we've passed the year 1933, so there are only so many of them in circulation.
- They're considered a true currency because when they were created, they were actually used to buy goods and services.
- They make up a much smaller piece of the precious metals investment market, rendering them more rare and more valuable.

- As a true currency, there's nothing to report to the government if you own or sell them, which means there's no paper trail.
- Pre-1933 Coins are very liquid and easier to exchange than gold bars so you can sell them quicker and for a potentially bigger return.

The Catch Is It's Hard To Find Them...

The biggest downside about Pre-1933 Coins is that they're not easy to find. For example, you can't just walk into your bank and ask to exchange your paper currency for $10,000 of gold coins.

And if you respond to one of those ads you hear on the radio for gold you'll most likely be sold post-1933 coins or gold bars.

This causes many people to go to pawn shops or retail shops in search of these precious coins...

However, this is when investing in gold can become very dangerous for the average citizen. That's because in most states, selling precious metals like gold is unregulated by state laws.

This means just about anyone can open up a retail shop and start selling gold... and they can hire anyone they want to work for them.

Even ex-convicts.

The people who work for retail shops don't have to go through background checks or be licensed with the state.

That means people who just got out of prison could be dealing in your personal information.

Many people are giving their name, address, social security number, total net worth, and even the location of their safe to someone who may have been convicted for robbery a few months earlier.

It may seem hard to believe, but it's true.

In Minneapolis there were nine retail shops selling gold and other precious metals about 10 years ago.

That year the state passed a law requiring background checks, and in the same month the law was passed all nine of those businesses left the state!

New Minnesota coin law targets shady dealers

As of Thursday, state will require bonds, background checks for metals vendors.

By Dan Browning Star Tribune | JULY 29, 2013 — 12:01AM

The days when a convicted bank robber could get a job selling gold coins in Minnesota are coming to an end.

A state law takes effect Thursday that will provide consumer protection for precious metals buyers and, effective next July, give the Minnesota Department of Commerce oversight over dealers and their employees.

The new bullion coin law will require criminal background checks and ban from the industry anyone convicted of a financial crime in the previous 10 years. Dealers also must post a surety bond that can be tapped by

Elderly Man Scammed Out of $700k of Gold...

And over the years I've heard countless horror stories of people getting scammed on gold.

For example, just last year an elderly client I was working with had bought $700,000 of gold and silver from one of these “retail shops.”

I asked to review the details of this purchase but all his prior contact had was an email stating how many gold ounces and how many silver ounces the client had.

It seemed odd to just have an email record of this so I dug more and found out that this company said they’d store the metals for the client for free.

When I heard that, my alarm bells started ringing and knew this person was another victim of these scam artists!

Over the course of about five months, I helped the client slowly gain possession of the metal. I had to get law enforcement involved along with my attorneys.

Long story short, they never purchased the gold and silver for the client and never intended to. They were hoping this elderly client would pass away and this $700,000 would be forgotten.

The last transaction to make the client mostly whole was a $400,000 wire from the scamming company to my company so we could indeed purchase real physical gold and silver coins.

After hearing several stories like this I decided to do something about it.

How I Got Started In the Gold Industry

Hi, my name is Ryan Long and I grew up in this industry.

My mom was a jeweler for 30 years and my dad was in the coin industry.

Throughout my childhood, my parents taught me about things like intrinsic value and why investing in precious metals is so important.

So when I started working in the corn fields at age 10 I would immediately turn my cash into silver dollars and dimes to hold onto for a rainy day.

It was always fun as a child to go through all of my old coins. I can still hear my dad tell me like it was yesterday, "Gold and silver will always have value. They will continue to appreciate in price as long as our government stays away from the gold standard."

This "coin hobby" when I was a kid turned into a passion entering my adult life... especially after I experienced first-hand how effective gold and silver are at protecting your wealth from market crashes.

When I was in college I had a side business that generated enough revenue that I didn't need to take out student loans to pay for tuition.

However, I did get loans to buy Pre-1933 gold and silver coins. Then the stock market crashed in 2000. As the markets fell, the value of my coins rose tremendously. I turned around and sold some of the coins, paid off my debts and still had numerous coins left.

During the next few years in school achieving my degrees in economics, I also learned the average recession occurs every 8 years. So over the next few years, I slowly kept buying more gold and silver coins. Then the market crashed again in 2008.

My Coins Rose 700% while the Markets Dropped Over 50%

Over the next 3 short years, my coin position rose over 700% as the rest of the markets dropped over 50%. I saw so many families suffer after 2008 -- people who had worked hard their entire lives, and saved diligently, only to be wiped out by a crash that was outside their control.

After this I knew my calling was to help people protect their wealth using the knowledge and wisdom my parents had instilled in me as a young boy.

But the problem was that once I decided to make a career in this industry I discovered it was full of scam artists and financial advisors who had little to no knowledge of how to invest in precious metals correctly.

So I decided to do something about it.

I asked myself, “Where are most people getting their financial advice from?”

Financial advisors of course!

And so I started to meet with these advisors. I sat down and talked to them about gold and silver and what I found out was shocking...

Most Financial Advisors Were Clueless About Gold & Silver

Most of them were completely unaware about how effective physical gold and silver are at protecting someone's wealth. When I told them my stories of how I not only survived, but thrived, the last two major stock market crashes, many of them were intrigued.

I also discovered most of the typical Wall Street “advisors” didn't know this because the companies they represented wanted them to have their clients invested in stocks and bonds because that's how they made money.

However, I also discovered that there's a big difference between Wall Street brokers (who often call themselves advisors) who just want to push their own products -- and true consultative wealth advisors.

Most Wall Street brokers primarily care about making money and keeping their clients in stocks because they get paid more.

And if they were to tell their client to move 10% of a $1 million portfolio into physical gold and silver then they would start to lose a lot of commission.

So it all started to make sense as to why most people were unaware of this.

However, there were those consultative advisors -- the ones who truly had their client's best interests at heart -- who wanted to help their clients with gold & silver.

But they didn't know where to find an honest, reliable, licensed source for their clients to have... which is what led to the formation of The National Gold Consultants Network.

I wanted to create a place where people could safely inquire about gold and silver without fear of being scammed...

And without being pressured by salespeople to buy too much...

Because as much as I love gold and silver, the truth is you can have too much of it in your portfolio.

In fact, most investors only need to have about 10% of their portfolio in physical gold and silver. Some may need or want up to 20%. But anything beyond that is typically unnecessary.

And those were some of the core values that led to the formation of The National Gold Consultants Network.

The National Gold Consultants Network

We are a group of Specialized Financial Advisors with local representatives across the country. Every representative here:
